An old town restaurant with history

Before the opening on October 15th, 1979, our building housed the “Schumacher”, a shop for table and bed linen. Across the street, the owner “Manne” Müller operated the restaurant “Adler Alt-Sendelfenga” – a real crowd puller.

The primeval Swabian “Manne”, however, was visibly unhappy because he had to send so many guests away every day for lack of space. It turned out that he was able to convert the “Schumacher” into another restaurant. The city of Sindelfingen supported this plan, as it made a significant contribution to the urban regeneration and revitalization of this district. When it came to finding the name, “Manne” held a competition. Many amusing names were suggested – the “FUNZEL” (“dim light”) was born!

The landlord spared no effort. He clad the facade with 200-year-old wood from Tyrol, the smaller rooms were furnished with wooden farm floors while the large dining room decorated with stones from a monastery in Styria. To honor the name “FUNZEL”, all old lamps were purchased. Particularly impressive is the wrought iron lantern over the front door, which brings about two hundredweight on the scales.

The “FUNZEL” was for decades “the old town restaurant for happy people” – a very attractive meeting place to meet friends in a cozy atmosphere, exchange gossip and forget everyday life. Heiner Weirether, managing director since the beginning, was one of the people who decisively shaped the restaurant and put it on the road to success.

On May 1st, 2012, after a long dry spell of the “FUNZEL”, the new tenant, Georg Schauz, awakens the old town pub from its slumber and continues the story of this extraordinary locality ...
